

Independent Living Systems Earns Accreditation From the National Committee for Quality Assurance

MIAMI, April 24, 2018 (NewsWire.com) - Independent Living Systems (ILS), a leader in providing turn-key health care solutions for frail, special needs and aging populations, has received the National Committee for Quality Assurance's (NCQA) Accreditation for Case Management – Long Term Services and Supports (CM-LTSS). The NCQA CM-LTSS Program accredits organizations that meet certain requirements and standards in areas such as conducting person-centered comprehensive assessments, managing care transitions and developing care plans.

"Since our inception, ILS has been focused on providing solutions to address gaps in care so that individuals may live in the least-restrictive setting possible," says Nestor Plana, ILS' chairman and CEO. "By implementing best practices that effectively address social determinants of health and foster independence, ILS' care management model provides individuals in need of services with person-centered solutions. We are proud to have achieved this prestigious accreditation."

In earning NCQA's CM-LTSS Accreditation, ILS demonstrates a strong commitment to adhering to guidelines that foster an environment of continuous improvement in the delivery of Case Management and Long-Term Services and Supports.
